

Crew Training Fact Sheet

Neurodiversity training for private and corporate aviation — formats, certificates, and the author behind the content.

One standard runs through everything Ethos Aloft does — reduce uncertainty before boarding, and shape the flight around the traveler. This sheet summarizes how that standard reaches flight crews, for forwarding to a chief pilot, director of operations, or curriculum director.

For operators and flight departments

- Format. A half-day module for your existing flight crew, taught in person by the author of the standard.
- Half day. A focused version of the same standard, earning a crew-level completion record.

For corporate flight attendant schools

- Format. A neurodiverse-passenger module embedded inside your existing course.

The author

All training content is authored by Denise Miniatis, who has spent more than twenty years working with neurodivergent people and flies as corporate cabin crew. She holds a BS in Applied Psychology and an MSc in Counseling and Psychological Sciences, and founded Ethos Aloft to bring both worlds — behavior science and corporate aviation — into the same cabin.

Certificates, stated plainly

Ethos Aloft completion outputs are certificates of completion issued by Ethos Aloft. They are not FAA certificates and not independent third-party certifications.

Next step

Pricing is based on your needs — fleet, missions, crew size, and training calendar all shape the scope. A 20-minute discovery call is where that starts: ethosaloft.com/contact.